Enforcement of Foreign Judgments, Part I: A Selected Bibliography on United States Enforcement of Judgments Rendered Abroad

This guide is a selected bibliography of primary and secondary materials on the recognition and enforcement in the United States of foreign country judgments. The time span represented by the cited publications is the nineteenth century through December 1992, with an emphasis on works published in the last three decades.¹ Works regarding enforcement of money judgments handed down from courts form the core of the bibliography. Therefore, although some general and introductory materials concerning nonmoney judgments (such as family law matters) and arbitral awards are included, an exhaustive listing of those materials is beyond the scope of this bibliography.

*Professor of Law, Southwestern University School of Law, Los Angeles, California. Special recognition is due Fredrick Ray, Southwestern Class of 1993, without whose expert research assistance this bibliography would not have been completed. The author also appreciates the earlier assistance of student researchers, Mark Tackitt and Debra Belanger, and Southwestern Research Librarian, David McFadden. Amber Lee Smith, International and Comparative Law Librarian of the Los Angeles County Law Library, reviewed an edition of the bibliography and offered many helpful suggestions. Finally, the author is grateful for the research support of Southwestern University School of Law.

Part II, which is scheduled for publication in the Winter 1993 issue of THE INTERNATIONAL LAWYER (Volume 27, No. 4), will include a selected bibliography of materials on enforcement of U.S. and other country judgments outside the United States as well as materials on reform issues.

1. All primary treaty materials and secondary materials are cumulative (i.e., they are listed, although they may be subsequently superseded or outdated) with the exception of those treatises that have revised editions, in which case the most recent edition found is listed. U.S. statutes and foreign statutes are those in effect as of August 1992.

Only materials published in the English language are included. The anticipated user of this guide is a legal practitioner who seeks to enforce a foreign judgment in the United States or to enforce a U.S. judgment in an overseas court.

In each part the materials are divided by type, beginning with primary materials and followed by secondary materials. Each type of material is subdivided into topics, with general topics presented first and specific topics following.

The overall organization of materials in each section, as well as the order of citations in each topic area, follows rule 1.4 of A Uniform System of Citation (15th ed. 1991) (the Bluebook). Citation forms are, wherever possible, in Bluebook format, with additional information provided where available, such as city and publisher.

Every effort was made to confirm the sources cited. In order to provide the most complete listing, however, some citations have been taken from bibliographic listings of other materials and therefore may be subject to error from multiple transposition. The author invites readers to bring other useful sources to his attention.

2. Abbreviations used in this subsection are as follows: Uniform Foreign Money-Judgments Recognition Act = UFMJRA; Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act - UEFJA; Uniform Foreign-Money Claims Act = UFMCA; Justice of the Peace = JOP. The Uniform Foreign Money-Judgments Recognition Act is the uniform Act adopted specifically for the conversion of foreign country judgments. In contrast, the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act is solely for the enforcement of sister state judgments within the United States. The UEFJA adoptions are included because the Act may be useful for lateral enforcement between states once a foreign country judgment is converted to a local judgment in one state.
